Essay assignment:

Write an essay illustrating either an example of “good” or “bad” science. Include in your discussion as many characteristics of good or bad science as possible for the example you are presenting. If you employ an example discussed in class, you should elaborate beyond what was covered there.

The length of the essay should be about 400 words and you must identify sources. The essay should contain a proper introduction of the topic, a clear and documented description of the issue, and some carefully argued conclusions why your topic falls in the “good” or “bad” category.
